

The Old Tree

Lyrics by Peter Fischman © 1996

Have you seen the old tree fallen down, fallen down
Have you seen the old tree fallen down
This old tree fell down so hard that the very earth was jarred
Have you seen the old tree fallen down, fallen down
Have you seen the old tree fallen down

This old tree had stood a hundred years, a hundred years
This old tree had stood a hundred years
Heard a hundred robins sing, every year another ring
This old tree had stood a hundred years, a hundred years
This old tree had stood a hundred years

Wasn't that a storm?
Wasn't that a storm?
Wasn't that a mighty, mighty storm?
Lightning flashing far and wide, rain drops falling side to side
Wasn't that a mighty, mighty storm, mighty storm?
Wasn't that a mighty, mighty storm?

This old tree had seemed so sound and strong, sound and strong
This old tree had seemed so sound and strong
It withstood the winter snow but it would no bear the blow
This old tree had seemed so sound and strong, sound and strong
This old tree had seemed so sound and strong

Wasn't that a storm?
Wasn't that a storm?
Wasn't that a mighty, mighty storm?
Thunder crashing all around, rain drops never reached the ground
Wasn't that a mighty, mighty storm, mighty storm?
Wasn't that a mighty, mighty storm?
